Last Week’s Meeting

HELPING TO KEEP TENNESSEE HEALTHY—Kiana Roberson (second from right), public health educator for the Weakley County Health Department, discussed a number of public health issues when she gave a presentation for Kiwanis on Feb. 25. She said that in her role as a public health educator she shares information about disease prevention, environmental health, nutrition, safety and disaster preparedness, substance abuse prevention, and more. Emily Routon (second from left), CHANT care coordinator, explained the Community Health Access and Navigation in Tennessee (CHANT) services of care coordination. The guests were introduced by Kiwanis member Kayla Colvin and were presented a certificate of appreciation by Kiwanis president Katie Parr. A donation will be made to the Weakley County Prevention Coalition in their honor.
